

ABSTRACT

Exhaust gas turbocharger

The invention concerns an exhaust gas turbocharger for an internal combustion engine, with at least one turbine arranged in the exhaust gas stream downstream of the internal combustion engine, wherein the turbine includes at least one flow channel with at least one radial flow cross-section, with a nozzle ring bordering the radial flow cross-section, wherein for the variable adjustment of the radial flow cross-section a variable guide vane is provided in this area.

Fig. 2